

Can I get the Age Pension?

The government Age Pension is a regular fortnightly income, paid by the Australian Government, designed to support the basic living needs of eligible older Australians.

Am I eligible for the Age Pension?

To be eligible for the Age Pension you will first need to meet age and residency requirements.

Age and residency rules

You must be aged at least 67-years to be eligible for the Age Pension. You generally need to have been an Australian resident for at least 10 years in total. For at least 5 of these years, there must be no break in your residency. Services Australia \(Centrelink\) allows some exceptions to the residency rules.

Top tip:

Apply early and avoid delays. You can submit your Age Pension application up to 13 weeks before your 67th birthday.

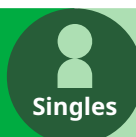

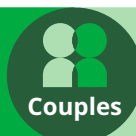

Means tests apply

What you earn and what you own affect how much Age Pension you are entitled to receive. To help ensure the money goes to those who need it most, Services Australia applies two means tests to the Age Pension; the income test and the assets test. Limits, thresholds and payment rates are indexed to inflation and are updated three times a year.

All figures below are accurate as of 1 July 2024.
